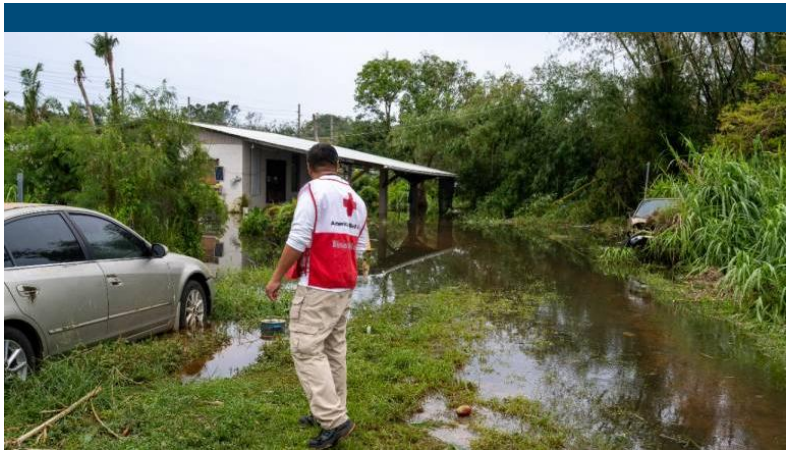
Includes domestic disaster operations with costs of $10,000+ (i.e., level 2 and higher).

Responding to Large Disasters Across the U.S.

Thanks to your commitment, we could prepare for and respond immediately to urgent crises across the country when we were needed most.



When Typhoon Bavi hit the U.S. territories of Guam and the Northern Marianas in July, the second super typhoon to strike in 83 days, we:

- Provided survivors, many still recovering from Typhoon Sinlaku, with food, shelter, financial assistance, and health and mental health services.
- Delivered supplies tailored to distinct needs, cultures and conditions in each island and community.

In August, a series of severe storms and floods devastated communities across Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. The Red Cross and our partners:

- Supported safe shelter for displaced individuals and families.
- Delivered meals, relief supplies, emotional support and basic health services.
- Distributed financial assistance to help with urgent needs.

STORIES FROM THE FIELD

Finding Strength After the Storm: Michele's Story

After flooding and severe storms damaged the apartment Michele Taylor was sharing with a friend in Gary, Indiana, leading to a roof collapse and the loss of vital medications, the Red Cross provided shelter, meals, blankets, health services, mental health support and help replacing her prescriptions. When a shelter relocation left her feeling uncertain, a Red Cross volunteer reassured residents, promising "he wouldn't leave us until we were safe." Reflecting on the support she received, Michele said, "I feel so blessed with beautiful people," expressing gratitude for the volunteers who helped her navigate the crisis and begin her recovery.

Providing Long-Term Recovery Support

Beyond our immediate response to support urgent needs, we also help communities and families recover in the months — and years — ahead.

Hurricane Helene: A key part of ongoing recovery from Hurricane Helene is home repair and rebuilding. To meet this need, the Red Cross provided a grant to Holston Habitat for Humanity to rebuild homes in Tennessee that were damaged or destroyed during the storm. Pictured above, members of the Red Cross long-term recovery team joined Habitat for Humanity staff and homeowners Jonathon and Dawn as they celebrated the completion of their home with a dedication ceremony in Greenville, Tennessee.

California Wildfires 2025: The Red Cross provided grant funding to partners supporting the rebuilding of homes destroyed by the Palisades Fire. From Sept. 23-26, 2026, Red Cross volunteers, partners and members of the community gathered for a community build day. Jacquelyn Clites, regional executive, and Bee Kong, executive director of the Santa Monica Chapter, gave remarks at the event kickoff, highlighting the power of partnership and the importance of being able to return home for families who remain displaced almost two years later.

Hurricane Helene, 2 Years Later

Landfall: September 2024

Just over two years ago, Helene devastated communities from Florida to North Carolina and beyond. Along with warm meals, safe shelter, critical relief supplies and emotional support, the Red Cross has provided $31 million in direct financial assistance to survivors, while also funding grants to community partners to help with unmet recovery needs in the hardest-hit states of Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Our Response:

- As of Aug. 26, 2026, the Red Cross had reached an estimated 473,300 people with disaster relief and recovery services.
- We had distributed some $31 million in direct financial assistance to help severely affected individuals and families address urgent needs and get back on their feet.
- With partners, we served over 3.3 million meals and snacks, and we provided over 149,000 households with relief items and cleanup supplies.
- We provided $61.8 million to support community recovery and resilience, including Response Impact Grants and Long-Term Recovery grants to community partners.

Hurricane Milton, 2 Years Later

Landfall: October 2024

Milton's trek across Florida two years ago brought destruction to many communities that were still recovering from Helene's recent impact. In addition to devastating storm surge on Florida's Gulf Coast, the hurricane also spawned damaging tornadoes and flooding from torrential rains in central and eastern Florida. Red Cross workers on the ground moved swiftly to support emergency shelter, relief and comfort for thousands of storm-weary residents.

Our Response:

- As of Sept. 9, 2026, the Red Cross had reached an estimated 13,000 people with disaster relief and recovery services.
- We had distributed some $12.6 million in direct financial assistance to help severely affected individuals and families address urgent needs and get back on their feet.
- With partners, we served over 500,000 meals and snacks, and we provided over 153,000 overnight shelter stays for people who fled their homes
- We provided $11.2 million to support community recovery and resilience, including Response Impact Grants and Long-Term Recovery grants to community partners

Financial Assistance Helped Fire Survivors Recover

When a fire quickly spread through Jaime Harmon's Morrisville, Vermont, home, the family was able to escape, but the severe damage resulted in the home being declared a total loss. In the face of tragedy, the Red Cross was there to help.

In the fire's aftermath, Jaime — still in her pajamas — met with local Red Cross volunteers, who provided her with an assistance card to buy food, clothing and essentials and helped her replace her lost glasses and medications. They also comforted her and offered emotional support in the aftermath of this chaotic ordeal.

"We didn't have to worry about how we were going to eat or what we were going to wear. We were still wearing pajamas."

Over 2,690 Lives Saved From Home Fires Since 2014

Of those, 825 were children.

Together with our volunteers, partners and donors, we have:

- Reached over 3.6 million people through home visits.
- Made nearly 1.4 million homes safer.
- Educated nearly 2.5 million youth through age-appropriate programming.

Lives saved and other data points both as of September 30, 2026.

"I'm convinced she would have lived if she had a smoke detector in her bedroom."

CAP Partnership Helps Fire Survivors Avoid Homelessness

- After a fire displaced a family in Bowling Green, Kentucky, they faced a possible three-month wait to secure new housing.
- We connected them with our partner HOTEL INC, a homelessness prevention organization.
- HOTEL INC quickly secured reduced-rate housing and helped cover move-in costs.
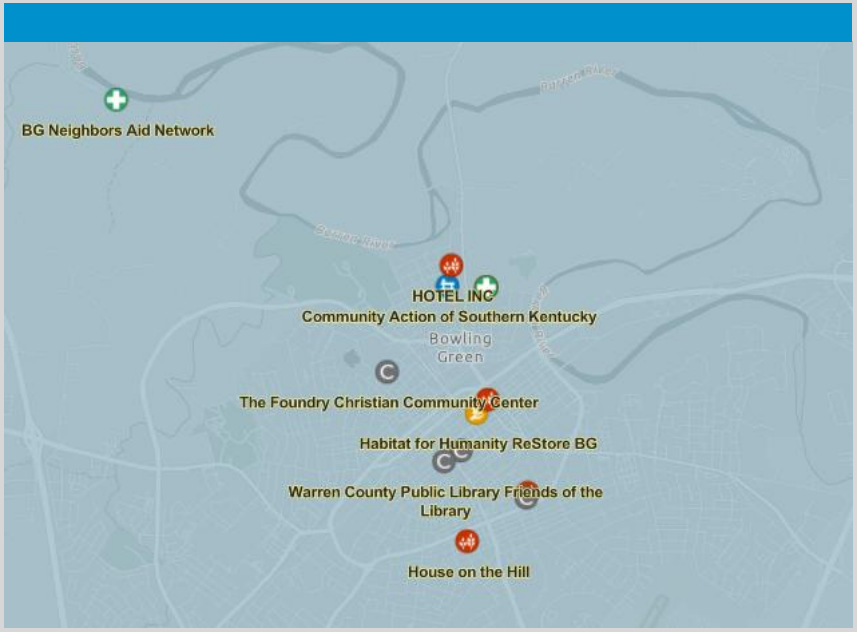
- Instead of simply providing a referral, we connected the family to a trusted local partner we work with regularly. This partner knew the community and was prepared to act.

We work with HOTEL INC through our Community Adaptation Program (CAP), which focuses on alleviating health, hunger and housing needs in vulnerable, disaster-prone areas.



Map shows CAP partners in Warren County, Kentucky, home to Bowling Green, and one of 19 counties nationwide that have a CAP.

Red Cross Responds to Devastating Flash Flooding in Nepal

Catastrophic flash floods in northern Nepal in late August caused widespread devastation, displacing tens of thousands of households and claiming hundreds of lives, with thousands still missing.

The Nepal Red Cross Society (NRCS) responded immediately with shelter, food and relief supplies and are now focused on emergency health services; water, sanitation and hygiene (WASH) support; psychosocial services; cash assistance; and restoring family links.

In coordination with the global Red Cross network, the American Red Cross has contributed $400,000 and deployed two specialists to support the efforts of the NRCS. The American Red Cross has long collaborated with NRCS prior to this disaster, focusing on capacity building and preparedness activities, and will continue to support the response in the months to come.

"The priority now is to reach affected communities and get assistance to people who have lost their homes, suffered injuries or have been cut off. "

David Fisher,
The IFRC head of delegation for Nepal

Bringing a Lifetime of Community to Restoring Family Links

Sujata Pokharel volunteers with the Red Cross and Red Crescent Restoring Family Links program, which helps locate missing loved ones separated by international conflict, disaster, migration or other humanitarian crises.

The American Red Cross partners with Red Cross and Red Crescent societies around the world and helps reconnect hundreds of refugees, immigrants and other individuals with their families each year.

For Sujata, the mission resonates on a personal level. She grew up in a rural village in Nepal during the civil war, and she witnessed the emotional toll that separation took on those around her. Those memories have stayed with her and continue to guide her work today.

"Family is very important in my culture. When I see people who have lost contact with their loved ones, it is sad. I feel grateful that we in the Red Cross can help rebuild those connections."

Sujata Pokharel,
An American Red Cross volunteer with the Restoring Family Links (RFL) program

America's Blood Supply
The LifeBlood Fund

Delivering Lifesaving Blood Products

The Red Cross ensures people in need of blood receive it. In FY27-Q1, the Red Cross impacted about 408,500 lives, thanks to over 1.1 million red blood cell units delivered to hospitals for transfusions.

Sickle Cell Initiative Hits Record Highs in FY26

Patients with sickle cell disease often need recurring transfusions of closely matched blood, and our Sickle Cell Initiative is helping meet that need. With generous support, we collected:

- Over 85,000 sickle cell compatible units, a 13.9% increase year over year.
- Units from over 100,000 African American blood donors, the first time the Red Cross has reached that milestone and 6,000 more than last fiscal year.

These results show what happens when donors and communities step up for patients who depend on blood to manage pain and live healthier lives.

“I care deeply about serving people and leaving my community better than I found it.”

Joseph Riley,
who has lived with sickle cell anemia his entire life, often experiencing pain so intense he couldn’t get out of a hospital bed

STORIES FROM THE FIELD

Summer Blood Crisis Ended After Selfless Donors Rebuilt the Supply

Hospitals and patients across the country count on the Red Cross for lifesaving blood. This summer, the nation's blood supply dropped nearly 25% in a month as extreme heat, illness and the end of school blood drives led to a four-year summer low in donations. Critical shortages put patient care at risk.

In response, blood drive sponsors and community partners stepped up. By hosting drives, filling appointments and spreading the word, they helped strengthen the blood supply and deliver more type O blood to hospitals. Together, they helped the Red Cross end the blood crisis on Aug. 16.

"Just seeing it there and ready for her gives me so much comfort. ...We are incredibly grateful for every blood donor."

- Katie, mom of Emi, who has been fighting leukemia for over a year. Without generous blood donors this summer, Emi wouldn't have had the blood products she needed.

Reaching More Blood Donors in FY27!

To help meet the mounting need for blood products in the U.S., the Red Cross is growing the number of Blood Donation Centers by up to 100 sites through 2030. In FY27, we are reconfiguring seven facilities and building 10 brand-new Blood Donation Centers!

FY27 Expansion

9 New Sites Opening

7 Facilities Being Expanded

107 New Blood Donor Beds

"I've had blood transfusions before. Since they saved my life, all I can do is do the same for others."

- Lee Jeter, a blood donor who received transfusions after a 2020 motorcycle accident that took his leg

When the blood supply runs low, as it did this summer, Blood Donation Centers give donors a reliable place to give. More centers mean more opportunities for people like Lee to strengthen the blood supply.

Hero Care Network Helps Family Reunite for Funeral

When Angela Boyle's father passed away suddenly, the Red Cross Hero Care Network helped her reach her three sons, who were stationed on three different military bases.

Military command relies on the Red Cross Hero Care Network to verify the information used to determine whether to grant emergency leave. We are the only organization congressionally authorized to provide this service.

With help from the Hero Care Network, all three sons were able to return home and attend their grandfather's funeral. Their grandfather was a veteran himself, and each of his grandsons was able to participate in the military honors.

"Because of the Red Cross, we were all able to be together to honor my father and send him off with dignity and respect."

Heroes Take Action When Every Second Counts

Former lifeguard Mitchel Schwenkmeyer recently received the Red Cross Certificate of Merit — one of the highest awards recognizing individuals who save or sustain a life using skills learned through Red Cross training. Mitch was having dinner with friends at a local restaurant when a fellow patron suddenly went into cardiac arrest. Mitch and his friends immediately jumped into action, providing CPR, chest compressions and AED support. By the time EMS arrived, the patron had regained a pulse and a normal heart rhythm and was able to speak. Mitch's recognition highlights the profound impact that training, preparation and teamwork can have when every second counts.

Organizations help build resilient communities by supporting Red Cross Disaster Relief

The American Red Cross relies on generous donors to prepare for, respond to and help people recover from disasters across the country

With help from generous organizations, the American Red Cross continues to provide help and hope for people affected by disasters big and small across the country.

September 22, 2026

WASHINGTON, SEPTEMBER 21, 2026 — September is National Preparedness Month, and the American Red Cross is recognizing more than 170 corporations and organizations that help power preparedness, relief and recovery as members of the Mission Leader Program, Annual Disaster Giving Program (ADGP) and Disaster Responder Program.

After months of severe storms, floods and wildfires, hundreds of Red Cross volunteers are currently providing help and hope to communities across the country. As extreme weather strikes more frequently and with more severity, families continue to count on the Red Cross. In turn, the organization relies on Mission Leader, ADGP and Disaster Responder Program members — along with their employees and customers — to help power its response to about 60,000 disasters big and small across the country each year.

Mission Leader, ADGP and Disaster Responder members contribute financial and in-kind donations year-round, enabling the Red Cross to prepare ahead and respond at a moment's notice when disasters strike. These investments help ensure the organization is equipped to act before crises occur — prepositioning supplies, training volunteers and more to meet immediate needs and support long-term recovery.

"In a year when communities continue to face one crisis after another, Mission Leader, ADGP and Disaster Responder members help make it possible for the Red Cross to be there from the very first moments," said Cliff Holtz, president and CEO of the American Red Cross. "Their commitment helps us deliver essential relief to people recovering from disasters whenever and wherever they occur."

As of September, the U.S. and its territories have already experienced several major disasters this year, including two super typhoons, tornado outbreaks, wildfires and floods. The Red Cross has deployed more than 14,000 volunteers in 2026 to serve those in need — providing help and hope to devastated communities.

Even with the increase in major disasters, the nation's most common emergency remains home fires. Support from Mission Leader, ADGP and Disaster Responder Program members also enables the Red Cross to help families prepare and respond if a home fire does occur. The Home Fire Campaign — a key preparedness initiative — has saved more than 2,690 lives since its launch in October 2014.

Disasters can happen anytime and anywhere, and National Preparedness Month is the time to take steps to protect yourself and your loved ones. Make a plan to stay safe, gather important supplies and know how you'll stay connected if the unexpected happens. Fall Back Means Turn and Test!

When the time changes on November 1, 2026, it's a great time to remind your employees and stakeholders to Turn their clocks back and Test their smoke alarms.

While large natural disasters capture the public's attention, it's home fires that the Red Cross responds to most often. Working smoke alarms cut the risk of dying in a fire by half.
