

Disaster Update: Fiscal Year 2020

(JULY 1, 2019—JUNE 30, 2020)

Help When It's Needed Most

American Red Cross

In a Challenging Year, Generous Donors Sustained Our Mission

A Message from the Senior Vice Presidents, American Red Cross Disaster Services and International Services

Here at home and around the world, dedicated American Red Cross volunteers and employees work tirelessly to help people in need, providing relief, comfort and hope following disasters big and small. And while we faced extraordinary challenges during fiscal year 2020 (July 1, 2019–June 30, 2020)—including the outbreak of a deadly pandemic—countless communities in crisis were once again sustained through our donors’ compassionate commitment to the Red Cross.

In the U.S., Hurricane Dorian and massive wildfires threatened multiple states—prompting the Red Cross to mobilize resources and support for thousands of evacuees. Frightening earthquakes rattled Puerto Rico, while severe weather impacted much of the South during the deadliest tornado season in years. And throughout the year, tens of thousands of home fires caused heartbreaking losses for families. Following these and many other disasters, Red Cross workers provided swift assistance and ongoing recovery support.

Beyond our borders, the islands of the northern Bahamas bore the brunt of Hurricane Dorian’s destruction, leaving thousands without homes and livelihoods. Massive bush fires in Australia consumed millions of acres, while thousands of migrant families who fled Rakhine state, Myanmar, to seek safety in Bangladesh faced hardships in crowded camps. In response to these and many other crises, the American Red Cross joined our partners in the global Red Cross and Red Crescent network to deliver vital aid.

Just as importantly, the American Red Cross helped people become better prepared for emergencies before they happen through our Home Fire Campaign, disaster preparedness education programs and mobile apps, as well as working to expand the response capacity of our fellow Red Cross and Red Crescent societies and implementing disaster risk-reduction initiatives around the world.

This vital work was complicated and transformed by the biggest challenge to emerge in fiscal year 2020—the COVID-19 pandemic. In the U.S., we made critical investments and changed the ways we deliver our services to protect the health and safety of disaster survivors as well as our volunteers and employees. Overseas, Red Cross and Red Crescent volunteers worked to help their communities cope with this coronavirus, and the American Red Cross also contributed to those efforts, providing financial support and deploying (both virtually and physically) specialists in mental health, communications and data management.

We are deeply grateful to the generous donors who power our humanitarian mission. With your help, tens of thousands of employees and volunteers have the training, supplies and technological infrastructure to deliver swift relief in the aftermath of disasters of all kinds—and remain on hand to help people get back on their feet and become more resilient against future crises. Thank you.

Aiding Disaster Survivors Across the U.S.

In fiscal year 2020, generous donors and tireless volunteers helped the Red Cross bring relief to individuals and families in need across the country. This critical aid made a real difference for people like Lynne Fredricks, who evacuated to a shelter staffed by the Red Cross and partners during the Kincade Fire in California. “Their kindness and generosity make it easier for me and other people who are [here],” said Lynne. “I am in awe, and I mean that seriously, of how [the Red Cross has] been able to put all this together and make it work.”

Lynne was among tens of thousands of people who relied on the Red Cross for emergency relief during disasters like the summer-fall 2019 wildfires in California, Hurricane Dorian’s march up the East Coast and a swarm of earthquakes that rocked Puerto Rico. In spring 2020, families also turned to the Red Cross when severe storms ravaged homes across several states in the U.S. as we responded to the deadliest tornado season in nearly a decade.

And just as disasters don’t discriminate in terms of whose lives they destroy, the Red Cross doesn’t discriminate in whose lives we help rebuild. The Red Cross is a safe and secure place for everyone in need after a disaster.

COVID-19: Safely Helping People Affected by Disasters

As the coronavirus pandemic took hold in the U.S. in early spring 2020, the Red Cross invested in resources like personal protective equipment, thermometers, cleaning supplies and more to ensure the safety of our workers and people affected by disasters. We also adapted our services to ensure that we could safely aid impacted communities, including:

- Prioritizing individual hotel rooms over emergency shelters when possible to allow for social distancing.
- Providing some services like recovery planning support virtually to limit in-person contact.
- Distributing meals and relief items like cleanup kits at pick-up sites, where people stay in their cars to avoid standing in crowds.
- Providing free fire safety resources online while Home Fire Campaign visits are postponed.

The Red Cross has also supported local partners to address urgent COVID-19 needs in communities—to the extent that resources have allowed—including supporting quarantine shelters, distributing food to vulnerable residents and supporting health and mental health outreach services.

Disaster Response Highlights

Over 900,100 meals and snacks served with partners.

Over 488,500 relief items distributed.

Over 207,200 overnight shelter and hotel stays provided with partners.

Over 99,200 individual care contacts made to support health, mental health, spiritual care and disability needs.

Over 23,800 households provided with recovery assistance.

Major U.S. Disaster Responses in Fiscal Year 2020*

During our last fiscal year, the Red Cross launched 19 major U.S. disaster response operations to provide relief and recovery support for people facing their darkest hours (including response operations for Hurricane Dorian in four U.S. states).

*Disaster response operations Level 4 or higher with costs of $250,000+.

Responding to Home Fires and Other Everyday Emergencies

Large-scale disasters made up only part of our disaster responses. Along with major crises from coast-to-coast, we continued to address smaller natural disasters and man-made emergencies. This included the nation's most prevalent disaster, home fires, with nearly 56,000 responses to these everyday emergencies in fiscal year 2020.

Often among the first on the scene, our trained workers met with affected families—sharing hugs and small comforts like warm blankets and coffee—and helped them to begin making recovery plans. The Red Cross also provided survivors with financial assistance for immediate needs and essentials like clothing, food and hygiene items that are often consumed by the flames.

In the first five months of this coronavirus outbreak, the Red Cross still responded to more than 20,000 home fires. To protect everyone's safety with social distancing, Red Cross volunteers have worked with local fire departments to connect with families by phone or video calls to help at a safe distance, offering a sympathetic ear and providing available support, such as hotel stays and emergency financial assistance.

More Lives Saved Through Home Fire Campaign

Each day in the U.S., seven people die and 36 more suffer injuries due to home fires, most in homes that lack working smoke alarms. That's why the Red Cross installs free smoke alarms and educates families about fire safety with community partners through the Home Fire Campaign.

While our Sound the Alarm smoke alarm installation events paused beginning in March 2020 due to the coronavirus pandemic, Red Cross efforts prior to that time continue to save lives—at least 796 since the campaign launched in October 2014.

These survivors include Ross and Betty Golly, of Oshkosh, Wisconsin. The couple, who are both deaf, escaped danger from a cooking fire that erupted at their home, thanks in part to alarms that had been installed that very afternoon by the Red Cross. lights, Ross was able to extinguish the fire before it spread further.

"I felt scared" to have the alarms go off, Ross signed as he told his story to Red Cross volunteers. Still, he said the Red Cross-installed bed-shaker and other alarms make him feel "more comfortable. It helps a lot," he added.

Home Fire Campaign Highlights

Figures cover October 2014–October 2020

At least 796 lives saved.

Over 2.1 million free smoke alarms installed.

Over 1.6 million children reached through home fire preparedness programs.

Over 893,000 households made safer.

Disaster Relief Spending*
$427.6 million

- Individual Emergency Assistance and Recovery—54%
- Food, Shelter and Relief Items—18%
- Community Recovery—13%
- Disaster Preparedness—11%
- Health and Emotional Support—4%

*The American Red Cross is proud that an average of 90 cents of every dollar we spend is invested in delivering care and comfort to those in need.

Food, Shelter and Relief Items

After a disaster, the Red Cross works with community partners to provide hot meals, snacks and water, both at shelters and from Red Cross emergency response vehicles in affected neighborhoods. We also provide relief items like comfort kits containing personal hygiene items, as well as supplies like tarps, rakes, shovels, bleach and trash bags to help people clean up disaster-caused damage to homes and property.

Individual Emergency Assistance and Recovery

Red Cross caseworkers help people affected by disasters create recovery plans and identify available resources from other organizations. Depending on the circumstances, we also provide financial assistance to help them with disaster-caused needs. Our caseworkers provide a calm, compassionate presence and consistent care, often staying in touch with disaster survivors for months to make sure their needs are addressed.

Community Recovery

Following some disasters—such as hurricanes and wildfires—that affect entire communities, the Red Cross works with a large team of partners to help impacted residents identify and access critical recovery services. When resources allow, we may fund strategic grants to partners with specialized expertise in areas like financial counseling, health and mental health care, and home repair and reconstruction, focusing on the needs of the hardest-hit and most vulnerable communities.

Disaster Preparedness

Before disasters strike, the Red Cross works diligently to provide knowledge and resources that make communities ready for and more resilient in the face of emergencies of all kinds. From free mobile apps that put lifesaving tools and information in people’s pockets, to our Home Fire Campaign, disaster education presentations and youth preparedness programs like the Pillowcase Project and the Monster Guard App, the Red Cross works year-round to help children and families become better prepared and more resilient against crises.

Health and Emotional Support

Trained Red Cross health, mental health and spiritual care volunteers provide emotional support and basic health services, including hands-on care, health education, help with replacing prescription medications, durable medical equipment or eyeglasses, and assisting individuals with their new reality post-disaster. In addition, specially trained volunteers offer support for people with disabilities and those with access and functional needs—a community that is often disproportionately affected by disasters.

Delivering Hope Around the World

The American Red Cross empowers communities, delivers lifesaving disaster relief and risk reduction, and helps vaccinate children against measles and rubella worldwide.

Preparing Communities Before Disasters Strike

“There was fear, but now there isn't because we know what to do if another disaster were to hit,” said Guadalupe Quintonar Peralta, of Oaxaca, Mexico. Guadalupe was in a state of shock after a devastating earthquake hit her community in 2017. Today, Guadalupe takes control of her future by volunteering in a Red Cross-supported disaster response team, learning vital skills like first aid and teaching neighbors how to build an emergency kit and create an emergency escape plan for their families.

Through a series of resiliency programs made possible by financial support from the American Red Cross and our generous donors, people living in disaster-prone communities in Mexico are learning skills that prepare them for future disasters. From providing hygiene and sanitation education to offering trainings on how to administer first aid, the Red Cross is actively involved in helping to build stronger, more resilient communities across the country.

Investments in disaster preparedness pay off in terms of lives saved and the cost of recovery. In countries around the globe—from Nepal and Myanmar to El Salvador and Colombia—the American Red Cross helps communities mitigate the impact of disasters.

Working alongside local Red Cross and Red Crescent teams, the American Red Cross empowers families to act as first responders when crises strike.

International Services Highlights

More than 1.8 million households visited to encourage measles and rubella vaccination.

29 countries supported by disaster response efforts internationally.

57 disaster responders deployed to international crises.

More than 6,900 families reconnected through Restoring Family Links services.

More than 145,000 people reached internationally with disaster preparedness activities.

Aiding the Bahamas after Hurricane Dorian

In September 2019, Hurricane Dorian battered the northern Bahamas for three days as the most powerful and destructive disaster on record in the country. A category 5 storm, Dorian claimed lives, destroyed homes and displaced thousands of people from the affected areas.

The Bahamas Red Cross helped families weather the storm, and 48 American Red Cross disaster responders deployed to ensure people received food, water, shelter materials, rental assistance and other lifesaving aid. Our teams put cash into the hands of more than 3,000 families so they could choose how to best meet their needs.

“You are Red Cross angels,” said Sheikadena Sawyer, who received financial assistance from the American Red Cross. “This is for my kids, they went back to school yesterday and now I can afford to get them their uniforms, workbooks and new clothes. All I can say is thank you.”

COVID-19: Pandemics Demand a Global Response

Just as the American Red Cross fights COVID-19 in the U.S., our teams also battle the virus around the world. In fiscal year 2020, the American Red Cross deployed a number of disaster responders in a remote capacity and contributed more than $4.3 million to the global fight against the coronavirus. The funds were used for health and hygiene promotion, case detection, surveillance and contact tracing, among other activities.

Today, we are providing ongoing financial support for preparedness, readiness and response efforts globally, including shelter, livelihoods, health, water and sanitation, and ensuring our programs are able to reach vulnerable people equitably and effectively.

Fiscal Year 2020 International Disaster Relief Spending $82.1 million

- Responding to Disasters—52%
- Recovery—27%
- Building Safer Communities—17%
- Eliminating Measles and Preventing Other Diseases—4%

Thanking Our Generous Supporters

The American Red Cross is deeply grateful to the companies, foundations, individuals, families and organizations who make annual contributions supporting our disaster work. These generous donors enable us to respond immediately and compassionately to meet the needs of those affected by disasters, and help communities become better prepared and more resilient ahead of the next crisis.

You Bring Our Mission to Life

Compassionate donors power the Red Cross mission to alleviate human suffering in the face of emergencies.

Whether it was shelter and a hot meal for a tornado survivor, a Red Cross caseworker offering comfort and helping a family find the resources they need to put their lives back together after a fire, or lifesaving training and preparedness skills to reduce the risk of disasters in vulnerable communities, your contributions have turned heartbreak into hope for people affected by disasters in communities here at home and around the world.
