The American Red Cross, a humanitarian organization led by volunteers and guided by its Congressional Charter and the Fundamental Principles of the International Red Cross Movement, will provide relief to victims of disaster and help people prevent, prepare for and respond to emergencies.

Mission

The Red Cross is not a government agency and so we rely on the generosity and aloha spirit of Hawaii's people to deliver critical services to our community. We are proud of our 93 year history of service to Hawaii and we are also grateful for the support of our 4,000+ volunteers and 15,000 donors for their compassionate contribution to the cause of humanity.

Help a hurting neighbor.
Every disaster is personal.

The Red Cross is on call 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. When we get a hotline call from first responders, our dedicated volunteers rush to the scene of a disaster within two hours of being notified, wherever it is, no matter if it's day or night. We work to meet the immediate needs of individuals and families affected by a disaster, to get them back on their feet after tragedy strikes.

This past year, the Hawaii Red Cross responded to 85 disasters (one or two disasters per week) reaching out and assisting 324 individuals, sheltering 72 and serving 829 meals. On top of this, we mobilized hundreds of volunteers statewide and opened shelters when Hurricane Felicia was approaching and we had a tsunami scare. Whether it was deploying to American Samoa after the tsunami, or raising funds for the Philippine typhoons or Haiti earthquake, the American Red Cross was needed this year more than ever.

In addition to responding to disaster victims with caring and compassion and helping people prepare for disasters, our mission is to save lives. Each year, we teach over 33,000 people essential compassion and helping people prepare for disasters, our mission is to save lives. Each year, we teach over 33,000 people essential

A MESSAGE FROM THE CEO

Every disaster is personal, no matter how big or small, or how many individuals are affected. Whether it's a house fire, flooding, a hostage situation or other tragedy, it’s a disaster to that person or family. When someone has just lost everything they own in a fire or loved ones in a tragedy, they are not able to think clearly. That's when trained Red Cross volunteers step in to help a hurting neighbor, to make sure that prescription medicine lost in a fire is refilled, that they have a bed to sleep in that night, or have help with first month's rent if necessary. We do these things without any expectation of payment because all of our disaster training and disaster services are free. We tell our victims that our services are a gift from the people of Hawaii.

Most people don’t realize that Red Cross is on call 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. When we get a hotline call from first responders, our dedicated volunteers rush to the scene of a disaster within two hours of being notified, wherever it is, no matter if it's day or night. We work to meet the immediate needs of individuals and families affected by a disaster, to get them back on their feet after tragedy strikes.

In addition to responding to disaster victims with caring and compassion and helping people prepare for disasters, our mission is to save lives. Each year, we teach over 33,000 people essential lifesaving skills such as first aid, CPR, nurse aid training, pet first aid and aquatics to enable them to help their own families, friends, co-workers and neighbors during times of emergencies. We also provide emergency communication between deployed Hawaii military service members and their families. The reason we could provide this assistance was because of the generosity of our donors, volunteers, and the community.
