

Diane Nossem

Diane Nossem is a communicator with more than 40 years' experience in corporate communications, operations, and administration. Diane is passionate about effective, persuasive, and entertaining communication from business-to-business and employee perspectives. She has strong interest and capabilities in strategic communications, specializing in proposal development and management, business development strategy and communications, integrated marketing communications, brand management and change management communications.

Her experience spans global institutional asset management, global manufacturing, healthcare, consulting, construction management, and commercial real estate services industries. Diane is strategic and process-oriented, succeeding in leadership opportunities for project management, team development, analysis, planning, and program execution. She is resourceful and creative, always looking for a better way, or a solution to the problem.

Diane is passionate about building relationships and finding connections with people. She is a keen networker and a devotee of behavioral psychology and crucial conversations – listening effectively and sharing meaningfully, helping people to identify and to accept their own value to themselves and others. Diane lives in Indiana and spends her free time planning visits to her adult children (and grandchildren) who all live in different states. Beyond that, Diane loves to sing, to learn, to cook, and to share meaningful conversation and cocktails with her friends and family.
