

Jolene Prather Dye

Jolene Prather Dye is the Director of Operations at Riggs Community Health Center, where she leads key administrative and clinical support functions that keep high-quality, compassionate care accessible to underserved populations. Since joining Riggs in 2015, she has held leadership roles across Patient Services, Utilization Management, and Executive Administration, building deep expertise in strategic planning, risk management and operational excellence.

In her current role, Jolene oversees multiple departments, including Dental Services, Purchasing, Facilities, and Patient Services, along with organization-wide initiatives such as capital projects, vendor management, emergency preparedness and policy development. Her work centers on empowering teams, optimizing systems and ensuring every aspect of operations supports Riggs' mission to improve community health.

Before transitioning into healthcare, Jolene spent over a decade in the restaurant and event management industry, experience that honed her people-first leadership style and ability to thrive in dynamic, fast-paced environments. She also previously held leadership positions with Planned Parenthood of Indiana and Kentucky, strengthening her commitment to equitable and mission-driven healthcare.

A proud Purdue University graduate and lifelong resident of West Point, Indiana, Jolene is dedicated to advancing community well-being through service, innovation, and collaboration. Outside of work, she enjoys reading and exploring Indiana's state parks.
