Inspiring Stories by Region

Electrician's Fast Response Stops Severe Bleeding and Saves a Life on the Job in the Cascades Region

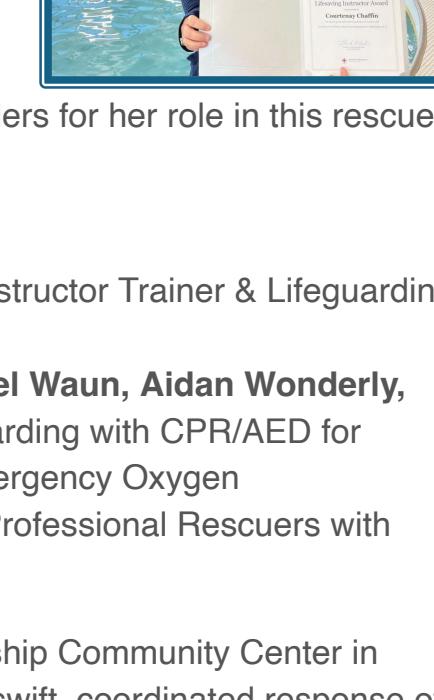

Electrician Bryan Barker was awarded the Certificate of Merit for his heroic response to a workplace emergency. While working on a job site, Bryan sprang into action after a carpenter fell 20 feet and suffered a severe arm injury. Drawing on decades of first aid experience and his Red Cross Adult First Aid/CPR/AED training, Bryan quickly assessed the situation, stopped the bleeding and kept the injured worker calm until paramedics arrived. His leadership and composure under pressure helped save a life. The worker received nearly 40 stitches and made a full recovery. Bryan's courage is a powerful reminder that preparedness and compassion can make all the difference when seconds count. Read more about Bryan's incredible act of courage and compassion on the region's LinkedIn page, and be inspired by how one person's quick action made all the difference.

Quick Thinking and CPR Skills Turn Crisis into a Second Chance in the Michigan Region

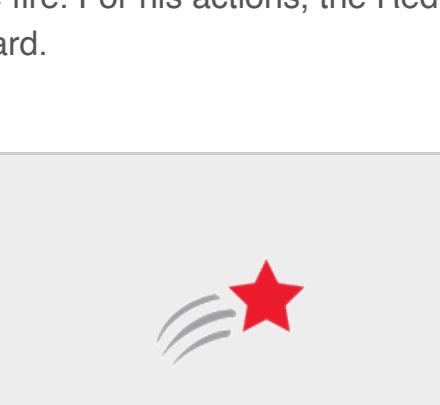

Amanda "Mandi" Garvey, a Red Cross certified instructor in CPR/AED for the Professional Rescuer and former paramedic, was awarded the American Red Cross Lifesaving Award for Professional Responders after saving a woman's life at a traditional Native American event known as a Pow Wow Circle. When dancer Debbie Hassinger collapsed, Mandi, who was working as a volunteer medic at the event, immediately began CPR, coordinated emergency response and helped deliver AED shocks that revived Hassinger. Mandi urges everyone to learn CPR because you could be "minutes from brain death once breathing stops. Ambulances can't reach you that fast, but someone trained in CPR can." Her story is a powerful reminder that preparedness saves lives. To see the full story, visit the region's webpage and watch the inspiring video on the local news site.

A Midnight Rescue That Saved a Life in the Eastern New York Region

In the early hours of January 4, 2025, Trooper John Schroeder responded to a flipped tractor-trailer on the region's interstate highway. It was a scene that could have ended in tragedy. Acting swiftly, Trooper Schroeder climbed into the wreckage and began emergency treatment, applying a tourniquet and stabilizing the injured driver in a confined space. His quick response bought precious time until paramedics arrived, ultimately saving the driver's life. Witnesses say the man was fading in and out of consciousness, but Trooper Schroeder's courage made all the difference. Read more about this remarkable story, for which Trooper Schroeder was presented with the Certificate of Extraordinary Personal Action, on the region's Facebook page and see it in this local news video. It will inspire you.

From the vault of The Baltimore Sun (Baltimore, MD), May 22, 1940

On this date in history, The Baltimore Sun recognized the death of former Sergeant Joseph "Joe" Hodges. Hodges was a patrolman in 1918 when he saved a small child and her aunt from being burned to death. When he came upon them, he immediately stripped off his raincoat and smothered the fire. For his actions, the Red Cross presented him with a Lifesaving Award.
